Sent on behalf of Commissioner Joe Giulietti

To all CTDOT Contractors, Consultants and Staff,

Although many of us are working remotely during these challenging times, I want to assure you that the Connecticut Department of Transportation remains open for business. It is not "business as usual," but we are trying to make it as close to that as possible. We believe that, now more than ever, investing in our infrastructure will help our economy recover. To that end, our construction projects are continuing as scheduled. In addition, project development activities including project design work and other support activities are considered "essential" and will continue. Other "essential" activities include project advertising, bidding and award, design support of construction, and bridge inspection.

The CTDOT headquarters building in Newington and the District offices are open, but only those with DOT-issued badges and those with confirmed appointments with DOT staff will be allowed in past the Security desk. Other DOT facilities and garages are also open, and road-maintenance activities -- snow plowing, pothole patching, guiderail repair, debris removal, etc. -- will continue.

As Governor Lamont has advised everyone, "Stay Home, Stay Safe."

Hang in there. We will all get through this.

Sincerely,

Joe Giulietti
CTDOT Commissioner

Thank you,
